Seems to be out of this world, but can you think of some recent events that might suggest there is still a way to go for total progress in the lives and roles of women?

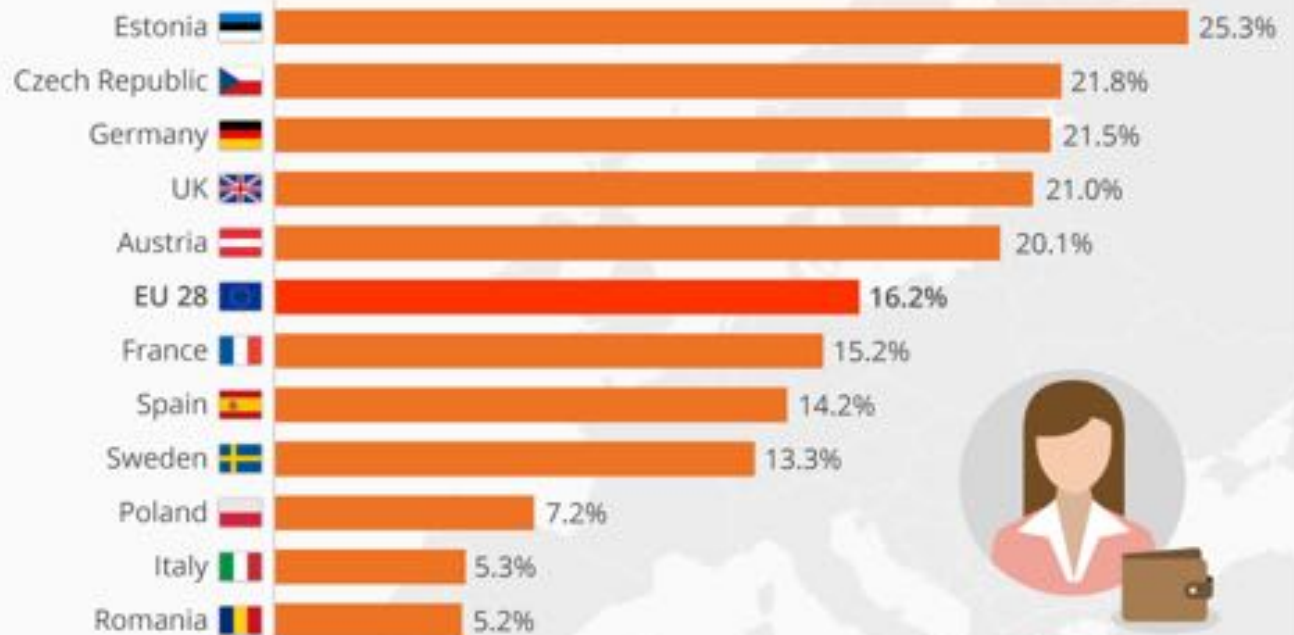

In 2015, there was an explosion in the movie industry that alleged women were paid up to 1/3 less than their male co-stars, even if they were more famous or experienced.

This triggered a massive war of words in almost every profession showing that today, there is still a Gender pay gap!

What does this source suggest about Britain in this war on Gender Pay Equality?

What does the #METOO movement suggest about progress in women's lives and their role in society

The #METOO movement has grown in recent years and has highlighted that over the last 20-30 years many women have been sexually assaulted and harassed by men of privilege and power. Many examples show that women were told if they wanted a massive role in a film they would need to do certain things.

The Movement, started in 2006 was meant to EMPOWER women to speak out and fight back against these assaults.
